i think for once the government has been fair with microsoft. the decision that was recently passed down is very encouraging that the right thing will be done for companies who are either ahead of their time or just plainly protecting what is theirs from others who see an easy profit. it is not in just microsoft s interest that a decision of the sort was passed down but for the good of every business. no one deserves to be treated in the fashion that microsoft was treated in the past.i am glad that period of time is over -everytime microsoft s shares went down so did the shares of a lot of other companies . it caused a horrible chain reaction-those who said they were doing it for some good were not telling the truth. people look up to that company when it started to go down in price people got very nervous-i don t want to see that happen again-it serves no purpose thank you
